TELUS is a leading Canadian telecommunications company with $12.5 billion in annual revenue and 12.1 million customer connections. The Learning and Collaboration team formed the TELUS 2.0 Adoption Council, and then launched the TELUS Leadership Philosophy (TLP), both of which are embedded into the life cycle of every TELUS team member. They were an early adopter of inGenius, the Skillsoft platform that enables employees to connect learning tools with the social tools used on a regular basis.

The TELUS learning organization are constantly seeking ways to increase learning ROI, to support their business objectives through personal development and to improve engagement in their development program.

Skillsoft moved TELUS to the new Human Capital Management suite which included a migration to Jam, integrating all social conversations, videos, wikis and blogs into one platform. Skillsoft then utilized a blended learning approach encompassing both formal and informal learning.

And implemented the Skillsoft Leadership Advantage™ and SkillChoice®.

It’s exciting to have an online environment that supports the culture and appetite of leaders and team members alike. Our partnership with Skillsoft works because Skillsoft is aligned with the direction we are taking."
